Mi casa su casa.

Hello there, nice to have you over at Mi Casa Su Casa's. 'My house your house' could be a translation of our name and we feel it suits us. Ever since we started MCSC in 2014, we intended to have a spot open to every kind of people and most of all let them feel free to be themselves. As we noticed with our relocation from the Laanstraat in 2017 where guests moved all our stuff within an hour or so, or the venue saving donations in the vital period of 2020-2021, a truly caring community has formed. A protest sign once said: 'love is doing what you've never done before', and we'd like to take that as a motto in life. We invite you to express yourself and connect—whether it be by coffee which we truly love—or our comfortfood, love, laughter and/or music..

sharing things we love

Expositions de la casa

We are fond of any arty-like initiative on our walls. We like to reserve space for local artists of any kind and age to expose their work

Noches de la casa

On special occasions we extend our opening hours into the evenings. For example for birthday or other party-occasions. A lot of gifted musicians, writers and comedians have visited us already. We love to share the stuff we like – please let us know if you're interested.

The Sweet adventures of the traveling sugarpot

Does our coffee need sugar? We think not. However, after tasting without sugar first, feel free to add some if you prefer to. We have sugar pots @Mi Casa but they wander around a lot. Take a look around you and ask your neighbour. Asking around for sugar sometimes leads to unexpected conversations. Are you in no need of sugar but are you interested in your neighbour – and you don't know how to start a conversation .. just ask for the sugarpot

We love the fact that we work with small independent suppliers who source and roast the coffee themselves, so that we can vary a lot with the different single origins. Every day we grind two different single origins for espresso and another one for filter coffee. Besides Keppeler we work with other well-known roasters such as de EspressoFabriek

It became painfully clear to us that from growing, to harvesting, to roasting, grinding and finally brewing the coffee so much things could go wrong. Even with the best equipment a barista can easily kill a 'specialty coffee without too much trouble – or – and there we find our challenge and satisfaction – do the specialty coffee justice and let our guests have an extra ordinary pleasant taste experience.
